The carburetor includes the following main components:

Fuel tank: stores fuel and is usually mounted on the bottom or rear of the motorcycle.

Fuel line: carries fuel from the tank to the carburetor.

Float chamber: controls the supply of fuel and maintains a constant oil level through the floating of the float.

Main nozzle: controls the amount of fuel injection and adjusts it according to changes in engine load and speed.

Air filter: Filters the air entering the carburetor to prevent dust and impurities from entering the combustion chamber. Idle speed regulator: adjusts the engine idle speed to ensure the engine runs smoothly at idle speed.

Mixing ratio regulator: Controls the mixing ratio of fuel and air to adapt to different working conditions.
