Motorcycle carburetor is a device used in the fuel system of a motorcycle engine to mix air and fuel in the correct proportions for combustion. It is commonly found in older motorcycles or some smaller, simpler models that do not use electronic fuel injection systems.

The main function of a carburetor is to atomize and mix the incoming fuel with the appropriate amount of air to create a combustible mixture that can be ignited in the engine's combustion chamber. The carburetor achieves this by utilizing the Venturi effect, which is the reduction in pressure that occurs when a fluid (in this case, air) flows through a constricted section.
