The tail light cover on a tricycle is a protective housing that encloses the rear light assembly. It helps to shield the light from damage, such as impacts, moisture, or debris, while still allowing the light to shine through for visibility and safety.

The design of the tail light cover can vary depending on the specific tricycle model and manufacturer. In most cases, the cover is made of a durable and weather-resistant material, such as plastic. It is typically transparent to allow the light to pass through.

The tail light cover is usually attached to the tricycle's rear frame or body using screws, clips, or other fastening mechanisms. It is important to ensure that the cover is securely installed to prevent it from becoming loose or falling off during operation.
