The rear fender of a motorcycle is a component located at the rear of the bike, above or behind the rear wheel. Similar to the front fender, it serves several purposes:

Protection: The rear fender helps protect the rider and the motorcycle from road debris, water, mud, and other elements. It prevents these substances from being thrown up by the rotating rear wheel and hitting the rider or other parts of the bike.

Style: Rear fenders can contribute to the overall aesthetics and style of a motorcycle. They come in various designs and shapes, allowing riders to customize the appearance of their bikes. Some motorcycles have minimalistic rear fenders, while others have more elaborate and decorative designs.

Functionality: The rear fender may also have functional elements. For example, it may incorporate the taillight, turn signals, license plate holder, and other electrical components. In some cases, the rear fender may also include a built-in seat cowl or a passenger seat.
