The rider footrest, also known as the foot peg, is an essential component of a motorcycle that provides a place for the rider to rest their feet while riding. The footrests are typically located on either side of the motorcycle's frame, near the rider's feet.

The primary purpose of the rider footrests is to provide a comfortable and secure position for the rider's feet while operating the motorcycle. They allow the rider to maintain balance and control by providing a stable platform to support their weight. The footrests also play a role in rider ergonomics, allowing the rider to adjust their leg position for comfort and control.
