The motorcycle handlebar is a critical component that allows the rider to steer and control the motorcycle. It is the main point of contact between the rider and the motorcycle's front end. The handlebar is typically made of steel or aluminum and is mounted to the motorcycle's triple clamp or handlebar risers.

The primary function of the handlebar is to provide the rider with a comfortable and ergonomic position for controlling the motorcycle. It allows the rider to steer the front wheel, maintain balance, and control the motorcycle's acceleration, braking, and shifting.
